Ben, the beaver leader

Every year before winter, beavers build their new homes to keep their families warm. Ben the beaver was old and his teeth were no longer sharp. It took him a long time to cut down a piece of log. The log was very heavy and Ben grew very tired taking to the pond.

As he rested, two more beavers, Bob and Barry stopped by. They looked worried.

Hello, Ben!" said Bob. "Winter is coming soon and I'll never finish my house in time." "I can chew through logs quickly with my sharp teeth, but I am so slow at building the house." "I am still fast at building, said old Ben but my teeth are old. It took all morning to cut down this one log and it is so heavy."

"The logs seem so light to me," said Barry who was strong. "I could carry them all day but I still don't have enough time to cut the logs and build my house."

By working together all three houses were built in time, and all the beaver families were warm through the winter.

All the three beavers sat there sadly thinking of how cold their families would be in the winter to come.

Then old Ben slapped his wide, flat tail on the ground and said 'Team work.'

Barry and Bob looked at each other. They didn't understand this word. "Team work? What are you saying? Let's work together! Bob, you cut the logs for all of our houses with your sharp teeth. Barry, you carry all the logs to the pond on your strong back." Then Ben continued, "I will put all the houses together with my quick hands. Then we will all have our houses done before the snow comes!"

Partho, the Park-keeper

Partho, the park-keeper is the hero of our story. He loves his job of keeping the park clean with his team of five men.

Partho is a good team leader because he knows how to have his men do the different jobs before relaxing with some tea and snacks.

The lesson also teaches us that we should maintain cleanliness in the park by putting all the litter in the bins.
